New Workshop - Autodesk Revit MEP: Project Startup Survival Kit - Space is Limited!

Date: Tuesday, October 11, 2011

Time: 8:30 AM - 5:00 PM PDT

Cost: $499 ($399 w/Subscription)

In this hands-on class, you will walk through the steps as an Autodesk Revit MEP consultant receiving an architectural model, cleaning it up, linking it into your project with the Copy/Monitor tool, and creating views for MEP views and plans. We will also cover tips and tricks for a successful setup that includes sharing coordinates properly with the architect. We will cover using the Coordination Review tool to check the model, the use of face-based families in a linked model, and using spaces in place of rooms. We will offer tips and tricks for defining a good startup template and simple customizations to annotation families for standards control. We will finish the class with the use of the Navisworks Export and Switchback functionality to set up proper nwc files for use in Autodesk Navisworks®, including tips and tricks to ease the effort. Kelar Specifics: Ease the Transition to BIM - Lengthen the learning curve for an easier & less costly transition.

So, you see the value of BIM (Building Information Modeling) and have made the decision to make that huge leap into this new process which is uncommon and unknown in your eyes. I know what you're thinking; your face is saying it all. You are starting to feel overwhelmed, confused, and stressed as you try and deal with the learning curve, while still meeting deadlines. And in your mind you're starting to think, "What did I get myself into?" Repeat after me, "This is all normal." Full Article

The Business of BIM Executive Dinner - Los Angeles, September 28, 2011

Thank you to all who joined us for the Business of BIM Executive Dinner last week. The event was a success, in part, due to your participation. We hope that you found the information sessions helpful to your business. With the competitive climate of construction in the current market, we strive to give our clients the tools and knowledge to stay competitive in their industry from the most up to date software to supporting their key team members as a partner.
